The organization of the robbery of olives and raw materials from Efrîn

Where are goods from Efrîn sold, who are the traders?

The olive theft in Efrîn

In the course of the Syrian regime’s colonial policy, Rojava was also known as the granary of Syria, with Efrîn specializing in the cultivation of olives, fruits and vegetables. The people of Efrîn have a special connection to nature and to the cultivation of olive trees and agriculture. Most Kurdish farmers were driven from their farms during the invasion, their farms and fields were stolen by the militias of the so-called FSA / SNA (Free Syrian Army / Syrian National Army).

Since the invasion of Efrîn by Turkish fascism, the extensive olive harvest of the region has been looted and sold worldwide by the Turkish state and its jihadist mercenaries. This is a trait of colonial politics, to steal the treasures of nature of the conquered territory and make profit with it.

The system behind the robbery

The Turkish occupiers, together with their far-right and jihadist militias and Kurdish collaborators from ENKS (linked to the KDP from Southern Kurdistan), established so-called “local councils”. Their task is the administration of the occupied territories and the distribution of the spoils of war, they have been established mainly to legitimize the theft for the public.

10-15% remains in Efrîn, while the rest of the harvest is taken to Turkey, where it is further processed and exported all over the world. Before the invasion, there were 100 factories processing olives into olive oil; more than half of the factories were seized by the FSA after the owners were displaced by the invasion. The FSA militias extort the harvest from the remaining farmers and the remaining crop is “bought” at less than 10% of the market price by the “local councils”.

Most of the looted olives are processed in Hatay province, which is right on the border with Efrîn. The imported olive oil is distributed partly through the Turkish Agricultural Council and partly directly through structures of the FSA militias.

The olive oil produced there is further distributed through various logistics and food companies and then sold under different brand names and companies.

Known Turkish companies that organize further processing and distribution:

The following companies were founded after the invasion of Efrîn, it stands to reason that they exist specifically to distribute the spoils of war:

MIR PAKETLEME İTH. İHR. VE TİC. LTD. ŞTİ.
“Mir Packaging and Import Export Company” was established in March 2019, the headquarters of the company is located in Hatay, right on the border with Efrîn. The company is responsible for the export and processing of olive oil, which is sold worldwide as “Cibal Afrin”.

MUĞDAT Food and Foreign Trade Company, is located in Mersin and was established in September 2019. Is responsible for the production and export of "Mugdat” olive oil.
In Efrîn and Turkey, the olives and other looted agricultural products are processed and then exported to the whole world via Turkey. At the beginning of the oil sales, the looted olive oil was identified as Turkish oil. In the meantime, sellers are no longer afraid to openly advertise that their goods come from Efrîn, but it can be assumed that olive oil “Made in Turkey” was also produced from Efrîn’s stolen olives.
